Im trying to build an application on a device with a HTC One running Android M, which is essentially a custom fork of the source tree (The Openmoko wiki says that "this is not possible at all at the moment, because the android build is handled differently to android builds on the PC and on Android phones. It builds everything in the arm build tree to static binaries that don't require the Java interpreter". Is it possible to build a static binary of my application with an android build? Are there requirements for this? A: To enable code signature verification you need to have java.security.sig (the Sigs.jar) in /lib. If you don't have it try to download it. You need to add the Android runtime permissions for Bluetooth, Storage and Camera. Then you have two options: build for arm and deploy it to a device build for x86 or x64 and deploy it on the Android emulator In both cases you need to support architectures you need to add this to your Android.mk ifeq ($(TARGET_ARCH),arm) APP_ABI := armeabi endif ifneq ($(TARGET_ARCH),arm) APP_ABI := x86 endif Run build on an Android emulator. The build is quick because all the tooling is integrated in the Android SDK. But you have to deploy it manually. // Copyright (c) Microsoft. All rights reserved. // Licensed under the MIT license. Game Play Selection Tilt Floppy-6/15/2018, 6/17/2018, 12:25 IMPORTANT: The Slappy board game is under constant development. The game is still in beta and is prone to bugs and changes in rules. We strongly suggest the use of an approved and tested save game to play the game as originally intended. Please note that the rules in this tutorial are intended for a SlappyBoard game without a Twist. The minimum recommended game set-up includes one of each type of player token in addition to Twist tokens. Table Setup Place the player tokens and Twist tokens on the table in the order shown in the following diagram. Setup Picture (Bbama) The setup picture below will be used in this tutorial for both Variation 1 and Variation 2. To better understand the table setup we will try to describe a board game version of a fully-matched round in two variations for each variation. We will use the numbers in the picture, the order of the EDSL tokens, and the coordinate of the EDSL tokens to identify each round. Variation 1 - First Round: Fully-Matched Setup Picture: 1. Round 1 Fully Matched Round 1 fully matched is the round where two players are continuously occupying all the same tiles in the game before the three-eighths final round begins. Lagging player and the winning player will play the same game on the same board at the same time. This example shows a game where the first-round match between Player 1 and Player 2 was determined based on "who lands in the middle?" Tiles can only be played after both players have played all their move-sequential tiles in a standard order. The winning player can no longer be declared based on where a player landed after the first round. The two players continue alternating turns until Player 1 controls all the tiles in the board. Example Variant 1: A player has insufficient move-sequential tiles to play, so the player must search for move-sequential tiles on the board. The player who finds the move-sequential tile controls all the tiles in the round. The player who goes out of position loses, but the player has no chance to make a play in the round. The winning player wins the game. Example Variant 1: The leading player has played all his move-sequential tiles
